This app reminds me of Corel Painter... there is a lot of power in the app, but it is hidden behind a poor and confusing user interface. It is in serious need of a redesign and simplification, while still keeping the search and organization power. It seems like they haven't really released a major update to the app in a while, and if so it's all been backend stuff without thinking about how that backend stuff is interacted with on the front end.

DEVON, you've got good software here. Please REthink it.

"Simplification" and "power" are not necessarily compatible concepts. Imagine trying to fly a Boeing 777 with the controls of a radio controlled plane. Which one is simple, and which one has power?

That being said, we are ALWAYS improving our applications. Don't doubt it.

Uh, I'm not sure how I feel about this app...

No doubt it's powerful and very classic.

But it also very "old" in many ways.

I planned to import a lot of files into it.

Then I tried to use a rename tool to do some batch rename works, the files were renamed but devonthink couldn't locate them...it just reported the files are missing, but it won't show the files which are still in the library just with a different name!

This is not a problem in the application. What you attempted is unsupported behavior and inconsistent with how a database works.

Does anybody know anything about this problem?

Of course I tried different browsers (Safari and Firefox) and computers but always the same "error" and google chrome does not work at all from the beginning of the buying process (purchase button) I hope the support will answer.

Sorry Roland. I just know I got the same error code as you in Safari, so I tried Chrome and that worked. Other than a restart, I don't know what else you could try.

Perhaps send MacUpdate an email that you're having trouble and they may honour the discount later, when they get back to you.

Good luck!

The full shows how much the developers really care about their app - not much!

Basically they have a nice neuronal network algorithm that lets them classify things.

All their apps are built upon that feature (which is nice) but lack in other aspects.

Wish they would spend some money on fixing their software (not just the UI/UX) especially sync, iOS app, fixing broken things...

All still running well on my new iMac5K. An amazingly fast way to manage huge quantities of post and pdf's images into sorted databases using its included OCR. Just a phenomenally useful piece of software.

My advice is buy it and a compatible scanner and get the upgrade and become paperless.

Mind boggling powerful app. Hats off to the developers I say.

My only complaints about DEVONthink in general are the mobile app sucks and the interface could benefit from a refresh. The engine that powers this software is fantastic and while it can easily overwhelm you with options, that's the sort of flexibility you benefit from later. Great support, which has been very responsive and hands-on with the half-dozen cases I've opened with them over the years.

So I will often delete the original so I don't mess with versions. Is it possible to bring only alias in the db ? or replace original with an alias to the db version ? Love also being able to outline words in a scanned pdf. Some Word documents don't show and some do. Will you add more file formats support (FileMaker for example)? Thank you.
